Description of School

Kettering University is located in Michigan and it is a STEM university that offers the following programs: Applied Biology, Applied Math, Applied Physics, Biochemistry/Chemistry, Bioinformatics, Business Administration, Chemical Engineering, Computer Engineering, Computer Science, Electrical Engineering, Engineering Physics, Industrial Engineering and Mechanical Engineering along with a Pre-Med program. Kettering is very unique because all students must participate in a cooperative learning experience. Students alternate between academic terms of classes taught by respected faculty and academic terms of full-time professional employment at highly regarded corporate partners. Through this co-op, students will graduate with 2.5 years of paid work experience within their field of study. Kettering is partnered with over 500 companies around the United States for co-ops.
