Description of School

Loyola University Chicago is a mid-sized (11,000 undergraduates) Jesuit institution in a world-class city. We are ranked in the Top 100 Universities in America, and with 80+ majors to choose from, our students are well-prepared for their intended careers because of our amazing alumni network and internship placement in Chicago. The school is comprised of two main campuses for undergraduates, in the Rogers Park neighborhood (the Lake Shore Campus) on the North side of the city (College of Arts & Sciences, Nursing, Engineering, and the Institute of Environmental Sustainability), and the Water Tower Campus in the Gold Coast neighborhood (Quinlan School of Business, and the Schools of Communication, Education, and Social Work). We also have three international campuses--the John Felice Rome Center, Beijing Center, and Vietnam Center in Ho Chi Minh City, for students looking to expand their international horizons. The Jesuit Mission focuses on providing Social Justice to the surrounding community, and holistic education for all of its students, to be sure that they can be Men and Women For Others by providing a broad skill set to the world.
