Description of School

With an emphasis on intellectual challenge, civic engagement, and cultural enrichment, Tulane offers unprecedented opportunities in undergraduate education. As a Tulane student, you receive the benefits of one of the nation's top major research-intensive universities, while still experiencing the engagement of an intimately sized interdisciplinary environment. The student body and faculty are among the very best in the world, resulting in a learning environment characterized by intellectual rigor, individual attention, and an unusually high level of scholarship. The university has five schools which make up one central university: School of Architecture, School of Business, School of Liberal Arts, School of Public Health & School of Science & Engineering.
