Description of School

Some students are drawn to the University of Denver because of its long-standing academic reputation, hands-on learning opportunities and strong faculty-student collaboration. For others, it's DU's global perspective and renowned study abroad program that are most compelling. On average, nearly 70 percent of DU undergraduates study abroad during their time at the University, expanding their understanding of the world at more than 150 destinations across the globe. And DU's location is attractive to, well, just about everyone. With a rare balance between cosmopolitan opportunities and the rugged outdoors, there's something for everyone.
